

OLG ceremonies unite Martinolich, Wilkinson

Miss Diane Frances Martinolich, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Andrew K. Martinolich Jr., of Bay St. Louis, and Christopher Claude Wilkinson, son of Col. and Mrs. Andrews M. Wilkinson of Waveland, were married at a Nuptial Mass at 5:30 p.m. Friday, July 21, in Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church.

Rev. William J. Kelley, SVD, performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with candelabra entwined with greenery and arrangements of white mums, daisies and gladiolas.

Special readings were given by Andrew K. Martinolich III, brother of the bride, and Samuel L. Wilkinson, brother of the groom.

Victor Frankiewicz, organist, rendered a program of nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire style gown of white organza and Venice lace fashioned with a bodice of matching appliqued lace. MRS. C. C. WILKINSON

The mother of the bride wore a floor length coral chiffon gown with a corsage of white roses and matching coral ribbon. The mother of the groom chose a floor length beige eyelet gown. A white rose corsage with matching ribbon completed her ensemble.

Hail to Hancock County Farmers!

We city folks, and we mean the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, at times fail to realize how much farming means to our county.

We journey down to our favorite supermarket and purchase such items as, pork, catfish, beef, milk, eggs, rice, and products containing soybeans, and probably don't realize the farm products may have been grown here at home in Hancock County.

We read our newspapers, carry our groceries home in paper bags, we purchase items in boxes and fail to remember these items are made of wood from trees. Yet, forestry items netted Hancock Countians $1,700,000 in 1977.

Hancock County had a special census taken in 1977. Our population for the county was stated as 19,313. (There are many who feel the figure is far too low). The Hancock County Farm Bureau has a membership of over 2,000 families. You break that down into people and that is over 8,000.

There are also those who have left the rural areas of Hancock County and have made it big in business and some have excelled in professional sports.

Not many counties can claim the president of such a large corporation as Gulf Oil as a native son.

Agricultural production in Hancock for 1977 was over 6.5 million, with a higher figure expected in 1978. Which business in Bay St. Louis, Waveland, or South Hancock can come even close to that figure? We are sure there are none.

Just as industries are important to Hancock, so is farming an important industry.

Farmers have good times, and bad times, just like industries. Farmers may change their type of operation or crops, but they keep trying to make a better life for their families, just like us city folks.

We congratulate the farmers of Hancock County for their part in making our County what it is today, one of which we as well as they can be proud to be a resident.

We city folks take our hats off to you, our neighbors and friends, the Farmers of Hancock.

Of The Office Of
A. F. Sumner, Attorney General

PIGEON DROP

Q - I have heard a lot about "pigeon drop" swindles. What is a pigeon drop, and how can it be detected or prevented?

A - A pigeon drop swindle works in the following manner: One or two persons will approach a victim on a street showing him or her a package containing a large sum of money claiming they have just found it.

They then persuade the victim to withdraw his or her money from a bank account for the purpose of obtaining a part of the found money.

Sometimes the swindlers claim they are employed locally and have taken the found money to their "boss," who has advised that the money is illegal gambling money and can be divided equally between the victim and parties who found the money, but only after each has put up money to show their "good faith."

In reality there was never a package lost or found, but was put together by the swindlers and contains a sum of money, horse racing tickets, bonds, letters and notes discussing gambling to induce the victim to believe that it is gambling money and would not be claimed by the owner.

Once the victim has given his or her money to the swindlers, the victim is given a switched package containing only paper or is coaxed into entering a building to see the fictitious "boss" for his or her share of the "found" money while the pigeon droppers make their escape.

HEALTH TIPS

from the AMA

Unless they have been immunized against it, virtually all children will at some time develop measles, a disease which can involve serious complications.

Live virus measles vaccine is safe and effective, and should be administered routinely to all children, says a pamphlet from the American Medical Association. Measles immunization is especially important for children with chronic illnesses such as heart disease, cystic fibrosis and tuberculosis, and for those who are malnourished or are institutionalized.

German measles is often so mild it is overlooked or misdiagnosed. But if acquired by a woman in early pregnancy, this disease poses a direct threat to the fetus. Live rubella virus vaccine is recommended for children between one year of age and puberty, with priority for those in kindergarten and first grade.

Live mumps vaccine may be given at any age from 12 months. It is of particular value in children approaching puberty; adolescents and adults, especially men, who have not had the disease.

Flu vaccine is generally advised for anyone with chronic heart disease, lung or kidney disease, diabetes, for people over 65, and for those in health, public safety and general service occupations.

It is not recommended for healthy children and adults, or for people allergic to eggs. The vaccine is grown on egg cultures.

Vaccines protect us against many of the great killer diseases of the past. Smallpox has been gone for years in the United States, and may well be eliminated in the entire world. But the vaccines against those remaining infectious diseases do not protect those who neglect to get vaccinated.

The swindlers usually approach elderly persons who are easily convinced they could have a share of a large sum of found money. An example of this is a 75-year-old lady in Mississippi who lost $2,000 in a pigeon drop swindle involving two women con artists. The swindlers were probably members of a well organized pigeon drop ring made up of blacks and whites, males and females, from Alabama operating in Mississippi.

They are usually well dressed females often disguising themselves by wearing wigs and sometimes by appearing to be pregnant.

A week later two men claiming they were investigating the pigeon drop case got another $8,000 from her under the guise of being government agents attempting to catch the pigeon droppers. She lost her whole life savings in the swindle.

Cases of this type have been reported throughout the state of Mississippi but are especially in the northeast and east central sections.

Citizens should be especially alert for frauds of this type. Bank officials and tellers should also be on alert for elderly customers withdrawing large sums of cash.

Citizens should report to the local police, sheriff's department, the Consumer Protection Division or Organized Crime Section of the Attorney General's Office any stranger who claims to have found a large sum of money and wishes to share it.

Events calendar

new service

from Chamber

'Calendar of Events' is an added community service the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce will be providing for the residents of this county.

Jerry Benigno, executive secretary, said, "We are excited over this additional service to the people of Hancock County. The information we collect will be turned in to a magazine called 'TV Facts of South Mississippi.'"

Walter Fulton, publisher of TV Facts, is a member of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce. Fulton said, "TV Facts of South Mississippi is designed as a weekly entertainment and community-oriented magazine whose unique feature will be the most comprehensive TV program listings available for this area. Surrounding the listings are columns of reader interest, sports happenings, community events, cross word puzzles and advertisements."

Fulton added, "TV Facts will be distributed free to Gulf Coast consumers in supermarkets, banks, drug stores, etc. The initial circulation of TV Facts will be approximately 10,000 magazines."

Ms. Benigno urged all organizations in the county to call or write the Chamber at least 15 days before an event. "So we will be able to get this additional promotion for all our local events."

TV Facts is interested in Little Theatre, Church Fairs, School Activities, organization's activities, and library functions. "Whatever function is planning, TV Facts wants to know about it," Ms. Benigno added.

The Chamber staff will be calling as many organizations as possible throughout the year but we ask that you contact us so that no one will be overlooked," she said.

WASHINGTON REPORT

FROM

U. S. SENATOR JOHN STENNIS

THE CALIFORNIA TAX REFERENDUM

The action by California voters to reduce government expenditures has attracted national attention. On June 6 they passed by a two to one margin a tax referendum, called Proposition 13, that will limit their annual property taxes to one percent of the value of their property.

This results in a drastic reduction in tax receipts to the State government, and will require that massive economies be made.

There will be consequent disruptions in the services provided by local governments, as well as those by the State. It is an extreme action, and one that perhaps may later be modified, depending on how well the legislature and the various agencies of the State government respond to the crisis.

What it shows that is very significant, however, is that the people of the area decided to take in their own hands the matter of runaway taxes. It was a taxpayers' rebellion at the ballot box.

In the last ten years the average property tax in the United States has more than doubled, the number of state, local, and Federal government employees has increased by half, and the costs of government have tripled.

The vote in California was a vote against rising taxes, against inflation, and against government spending.

The public reaction is not unique to California. In Ohio, on the same day, the voters turned down 60 percent of the bond issues and school levies that had been proposed.

In Michigan and Oregon property tax referendums are being sponsored. In Nebraska the legislature met in special session to consider limits on government spending, because of a drive for a constitutional amendment. Tennessee has passed a constitutional amendment to keep the growth of expenditures to the level of economic growth.

Income taxes have been cut this year in five states, and standard deductions increased in two, including Mississippi. A national survey showed that in 26 states measures are being considered or have passed that in one way or another will limit taxes or spending.

The message should be very clear. The average, middle-income taxpayer is being pushed to the point of rebellion, and is using the constitutional right of the ballot to express his displeasure. It is a revolt against plush government budgets, spending programs that never stop expanding, and unbalanced budgets that fire inflation.

The message should be also very clear at the national level. There simply has to be an end to the immoderate and irrational expansion of Federal spending. In the last fifteen years the Federal budget has seen a four-fold increase, from about $100 billion to more than $400 billion.

The national debt at the beginning of the year was over $650 billion. The annual deficits are more than the entire budget was in 1950.

Now it is one thing to vote for a reduction in property taxes, and another and different vote if it were to be on the reverse question - a vote to cut the subsidies that come down from the Federal and State governments.

That is a harder question, but it will come about when the people see the necessity. The issue would be much clearer if the Federal subsidy programs that are run from Washington were stopped, and the money apportioned to States and local governments to use as they choose to meet their needs as they see them.

Direct responsibility and control would bring in focus the present extravagance of big government.

What eventually may be required is a constitutional amendment that will require the Federal government to operate on a pay-as-you-go basis. It would require that if Congress went over the budget then Congress would also have the obligation of increasing taxes enough to bring the budget back in balance.

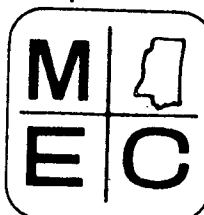

This would bring about a strong sense of financial responsibility very quickly.

I am a cosponsor of a resolution proposing this. These recent occurrences at the ballot boxes in various States are showing how the American people feel, and it is up to the Federal government to respond.

Proposition 13 on taxes being limited on property will not solve all problems but it shows the people are aroused and can do something about it.

This calls for a national resetting of priorities. As I see it, there must be a ceiling put on every government board that has the power to impose taxes.

This will have to extend from every village, county, city and state power to the National Congress itself. Otherwise, inflation and taxes together will destroy the middle group of taxpayers who are already being gradually crushed.

News

MISSISSIPPI ECONOMIC COUNCIL - THE STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The United States Chamber of Commerce and the Gallup Poll jointly conduct quarterly surveys of the nation's business executives to determine their attitudes and opinions of economic conditions and the economic policies of government.

In one of these recent surveys, results were compiled by states. Here are some of the attitudes and opinions of Mississippi's business leaders, as reflected by the poll:

Thirty-seven percent of the business people of Mississippi expect a recession during 1978 and 1979.

Fifty-two percent expect double-digit inflation (10 percent or higher), and 74 percent expect higher interest rates.

Still, half the business executives expect higher sales, and 8 percent predict higher profits, after adjusting for inflation.

Also, Mississippi businessmen believe that government taxing policies and government regulations are reducing employment opportunities, reducing potential for modernization or expansion of plants and equipment, adding to business costs, and accelerating inflation. More than 70 percent of the Mississippi businessmen taking part in the survey complained about tax policies and government regulations.

At the same time, 60 percent said state and local regulations create serious problems, and 28 percent complained about the adverse effects on business of state and local taxes.

This seems to indicate that Mississippi business leaders are concerned about inflation, interest rates, taxes, and government regulation, but, even with those concerns, they are still optimistic about the future.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, AMERICA

Edmund Burke said it, 19 years after the founding of this nation:

"The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing."

The truth of his statement may be more significant to us today than it was to the people of his day.

The United States of America has survived - yes, flourished - these 202 years because its good men have been willing to love her, support her, protect and defend her.

Good men have attacked the evils which have threatened her at home and around the world. Wars have been fought to protect her; evil men who threatened her have been brought to a time of accountability; and good men have been constantly alert to any dangers which have surfaced along the path of her history.

An anniversary is a good time to stop, take stock, renew old commitments, and make new resolutions.

What better gift to the United States of America on her 202nd birthday than to reaffirm our support of her, reaffirm our faith in her, and recommit ourselves to her honor and her defense?

GCRL presents

Gulf wonders

Utility deposit waiver in effect for Seniors

In a recent announcement from the Mississippi Public Service Commission, a rule change which may ease the financial burden of older people in Mississippi was issued.

The three-member commission issued one rule change which would waive the deposit requirement for those utility customers 60 or older who meet certain qualifications. This does not apply to municipal or state-owned utility companies;

however, it does pertain to the telephone company.

The commission also stated,
"those persons 60 years of age or older who currently have deposits with regulated utility companies in Mississippi can, upon providing necessary
proof of age and qualification, request and be refunded their deposit."

The PSC directed utility companies to render monthly bills at regular intervals, not to exceed 31 days. "If a utility company renders a bill in excess of 31 days, the customer shall be entitled to deduct an amount equal to the average daily cost multiplied by the number of days for which service was billed in excess of 31 days," they said.

These changes were designed to give senior citizens with good paying records a break from having to post a deposit, and to prevent a utility company from sending customers bills covering long periods.

Persons 60 years of age or older who need assistance in applying for deposit rebates, relief from excessively long bills, or waiver of utility deposits should contact their utility companies.

There is a river that flows from Calvary where all mankind may wash and be clean. This "River" has never lost its power or the meaning of it flows. This "River" is the shed Blood of Jesus. His name is Jesus.
I know about you, but to me, those five letters of the name of Jesus remind me of David's five stones, picked up from the brook, by which he slew Goliath.
To this Name all redeemed Angels of God bow. In the River of God, the human Name of Christ (Jesus) had lain for centuries awaiting the day when it would be put into the singing of the Cross, to bring about the downfall of the Devil.
The sling became the Cross at Calvary and Jesus the Rock that defeated Satan. Hallelujah!
The five bars of the tabernacle were never as wonderful as these five little letters of His Name. For they hold together His Church now and right on into eternity.
Just whisper it on earth and it, Beloved, will sound like thunder claps in Heaven. Why not take the Name of Jesus upon your lips and let it be there, until, time sweeps us into eternity together.

By S. Grady Thigpen

Thigpen reviews Botkin's 'A Treasury of Mississippi River Folklore'

In 1955, B.A. Botkin published his book, A TREASURY OF MISSISSIPPI RIVER FOLKLORE, consisting of stories, ballads, traditions, and folkways of the Mississippi river country.

Botkin's book is more than just tall tales and entertainment. It helps the student of the history of the great middle area of the United States to understand the life and thinking of the people who lived in this great area.

We must remember that back in those days they had almost none of the sources of recreation and entertainment that we have today. They lived in a different world than that with which we are familiar. Tall tales and stories were great sources of entertainment and amusement.

Here's a story of a traveler in central Mississippi:

"This traveler came to a ferry on Leaf River and wanted the ferryman to take him across, but the river was up and a crossing would be dangerous.

The traveler was so insistent however, that the ferryman finally consented, saying, "All right, I'll carry you over, but I ain't going to risk my life and my boat for the regular fare. It's going to cost you a quarter to get across."

"But I ain't got but 15 cents," explained the traveler. "You got to take me for that. Your regular fare is only 10 cents."

"I ain't going to do it," said the ferryman. "That's all. Anybody that ain't got but 15 cents, it don't make no difference which side of the river he's on anyhow."

B.A. Botkin has written a number of books on the folk lore of different sections of this country. He says that every time a fisherman tells the truth one of his ears falls off, yet he never saw on that river a man with less than two ears.

Sometimes I think the same thing might be said of the fisherman in this section around Picayune. I have not seen any fisherman here with less than 2 ears.

Botkin tells a story of a boat captain who came in late. The owner of the boat asked him what the trouble was, and he replied, "This crazy river is too thick in mud to navigate and not thick enough to plant in a crop."

Most people know that Abraham Lincoln was an experienced river man, making a number of trips down the Mississippi to New Orleans. He once compared a lawyer, who was on the opposite side from his in lawsuit, to a river boat in this way:

"I never knew of but one thing which compared with my friend in this particular. That was a steamboat. Back in the day when I performed my part as a keelboatman, I made the acquaintance of a trifling little steamboat which used a bustle, and puff, and wheeze about the Sangamon River. It had a 5 ft. boiler and a 7 ft. whistle, and every time it whistled the boat stopped."

Timber cruisers performed a very necessary function back in those times. The timber cruiser had to explore the country and know the land and the land lines so as to keep down law suits and trespassing on the part of the timber companies.

The timber cruiser had to be a hardy man that could stay out for days and even weeks at a time in any kind of weather. He had to have a sharp mind and be able to keep a picture of the country in his mind. He had to be a woodsman, a man of the forest, and able to live off the land if necessary. He had to be an expert hunter because he had to depend at times on his hunting ability to get his food.

On the land records in the Chancery Clerk's office at Poplarville this notation is found on one of the old plats, having been put there by a timber cruiser or surveyor when running out the land near Walkiah Bluff:

"I killed a young black bear at this corner yesterday." Author Botkin pays a real tribute to the old timber cruiser - the surveyor of the good old days.

Another tall tale that always gets a laugh out of the hunter is this one about the coon hunting of Bob Hooter:

"Bob Hooter, a great grandson of Mike Hooter, legendary Delta character, is naturally an expert in the difficult art of coon hunting. Nowadays, just finding one coon somewhere in a slough or swamp is a satisfactory conclusion for most hunts, but Bob and the coon dogs he always kept are never content with anything less than a coon den when they can catch a whole bunch of coons at one time.

One night Bob Hooter was walking along a road near where he lived with two companions when two of the dogs raced past on the heels of a fleeing coon. Bob and his friends quickly grabbed some tree limbs and clubs and followed up the chase.

They found the dogs barking at the foot of a large tree with a hole at the bottom into which the coon ran. They rapped on the hollow tree several times and saw that they had found a coon den.

The coons started pouring out in a steady stream and Bob and his two friends stood at the entrance and proceeded to give each coon a healthy lick as it came out. The coons kept coming out for a solid hour, to make a total variously estimated at anywhere from 100 to 500 coons.

When the last one had come out, they built a fire to check on how many they had killed. "We didn't kill a single coon," said Bob, "but we did beat off 400 lbs. of coon fur."

And another story about Bob Hooter says that one day in making the rounds of his place he met up with a rattle snake.

He ran back, grabbed a hoe handle made of sassafras. He swung at the snake, but the snake had begun to strike and he missed it and the snake sank its fangs into the hoe handle. Bob ends the story by saying, "That handle swelled up so big that we split it up and it made four fence posts."

Bob Hooter was a big fisherman as well as hunter. The story is told that Dan Tayler, a neighbor, had a new baby born into his family. Dan wanted to know how much the new baby weighed and not having any scales, he hurried over to Bob Hooter's house to borrow some scales and Mrs. Hooter let him have his fish on. They put the baby on these scales and it weighed 59 lbs.

If you like to read interesting, and amusing old stories and tall tales I suggest that you go to the library and get a copy of A TREASURY OF MISSISSIPPI RIVER FOLKLORE by B.A. Botkin. You'll enjoy it, there are hundreds of these tales in the book.

One steamboat captain was a very religious old man. It was his custom to assemble the members of his crew on deck on Sunday mornings and hold prayer meeting, at which he offered the prayer.

There are literally hundreds of these old tales in this book, A TREASURY OF MISSISSIPPI RIVER FOLKLORE. Back in the old days these stories would be told at old time stores and published in the few papers then in circulation and people would, as the saying goes, die laughing at them. There were no shows to attend, no radio, no TV.

To give an idea of some of them here are just a few verses I selected at random. Working on a push boat for fifty cents a day;

Buy my girl a brand new dress, and throw the rest away.

I wish I had a nickel, I wish I had a dime;

I'd spend it all on Cynthia Jane And dress her mighty fine.

This time another year, I may be rollin' but it won't be here.

Cap'n, Cap'n, doncha think it's mighty hard? Work me all day on lasses and lard.

Cap'n, Cap'n, you must be cross, Six'clock in Hades fore you knock off.

Yes, I like to get hold of a book like Botkin's once in awhile.

harvest due to icing of ponds in North Mississippi.

J. Norton Haas gave a rundown on McLeod Park, a Pearl River Basin Development District project. He said the park was given 100 per cent support by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors.

Haas reminded the touring group the park is in the buffer zone and that negotiations with the federal government were necessary to secure the "Fine facility which is enjoyed by Hancock residents and neighboring visitors as well."

At Catapoula Community, Frank Lee gave the group a tour of one of his soybean fields. Lee discussed how farmers deal with futures and how market changes effect all farmers and farm products.

In Flatop, a swine finishing operation by Paul Bounds showed how it is done in the 20th century. Some 500 hogs are fed and watered with just the push of a button.

The group got to see Chester Lee's commercial beef production farm via the bus. W. Halstead, MTCA bus driver on duty the third year in a row for the Hancock Farm-City tour, was able to drive over the pasture and landing strip combination field among the prize cattle raised by Chester Lee.

Lee is also known as the founder of the Prisoners Bible Crusade, Inc. One of the purposes of that organization is to purchase and distribute Bibles to inmates in prisons.

Lee says his organization has placed Bibles in prisons in 31 states.

Sandwiches, ice tea, red velvet cake, and home grown watermelon was on the lunch menu at the home of the Louis Lee's.

L.J. Breaux announced a new Farm Bureau Service in conjunction with the National Sheriff's Association - the identification of farm equipment and products.

"Crime on the farm is on the increase," stated Frank Lee, "and we are trying to help prevent crime."

Farms lose millions of dollars each year in equipment and chemicals, according to Breaux and Lee.

All Farm equipment and materials are marked for owner identification to help protect the farmers.

Even products like corn and soybeans are marked with a confetti showing ownership.

After lunch a visit was made to the Lynn G. McGehee Dairy farm. The farm is just about to go into production.

Two large silos are being filled with corn grown on the 100-acre farm. The silos hold a total of 1,600 tons of silage according to McGehee.

At Rocky Hill Fire Tower, Steve Corbitt, area forester, Harrison County, gave a talk on efforts of the Forestry Department in Hancock County. John Smith, County Agent, said there is an opening for a Hancock County Forester now.

Corbitt noted Hancock County is second in the number of Forest fires in the State.

Harrison County has more fires than any other in Mississippi.

"A lot of wood is hauled out of Hancock County and it is a big business," stated Corbitt.

Bob Whitfield of Kiln Pulpwood Yard explained how the yard operated. He told how some wood is delivered to the yard in short lengths and other is brought in tree length and sawed before being loaded on barges for shipment to International Paper's plant in Moss Point.

On the return home, Norton Haas, Kiln native, told about the history of Kiln and the role it played in the timber industry.

The tour ended in Bay St. Louis at 4:15 p.m.

WATERMELON SERVER - Frank Lee, right, did the honors of carving the watermelons for the Farm-City Tour. Fred Logan, right, tries some for taste.

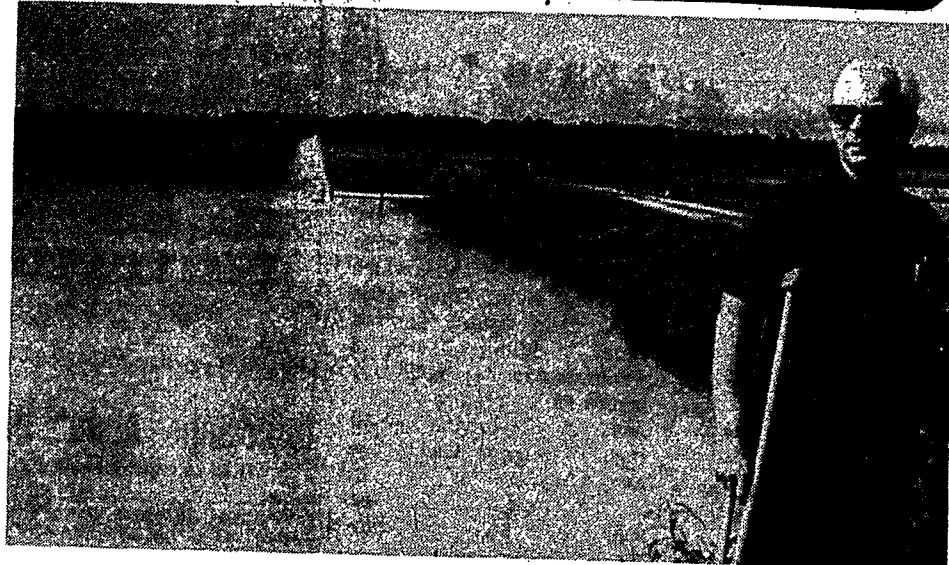

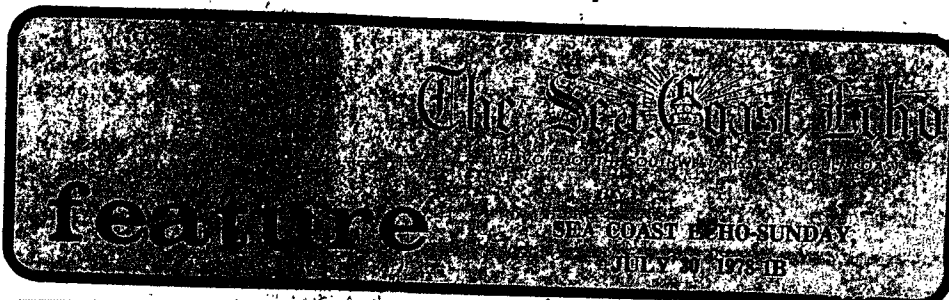

Mrs. Chester Lee

Paul Bounds, swine grower

James Rester, Farm Bureau manager

CATFISH POND - Ray Lockhart raises catfish in this pond and then uses the water in rice fields. Dix Ashman, Waveland, was one of many to make Farm-City Tour Thursday.

YOU AND YOUR PET

By Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.
Manager of Veterinary Services
Norden Laboratories

COCCIDIOSIS IN DOGS

Each year dog and cat owners purchase large quantities of worming compounds to control intestinal parasites in their pets. Often pet owners decide worms are present by observing their pets eating grass, rubbing their hindquarters along the ground, or suffering from diarrhea.

However, these symptoms can be characteristic of all sorts of diseases, including indigestion, protozoa infections and others. The only reliable indication of a worm infection is identification of the worm or its eggs in the feces. Your veterinarian is best qualified to do this by a microscopic examination.

Coccidiosis is a major parasitic infection often mistaken for worm infestation. It is caused not by worms but by tiny one-celled animals called coccidia, that invade the small intestine of young animals and destroy tissue as they multiply.

Coccidia thrive in dirty, overcrowded and damp living quarters where animal feces are allowed to accumulate. Young animals can ingest the parasite eggs as they groom their feet after walking across a dirty run. Pets also become infected by swallowing eggs or larvae deposited in food by flies and other insects.

Once infected, pets show symptoms of coccidiosis that are frequently confused with those of other intestinal diseases. Chronic diarrhea (often blood-tinged) is the key sign. The diarrhea causes the pet to become dehydrated, with listless eyes and no appetite. In more severe cases, the pet may show cold symptoms along with a slight fever. Should you recognize the warning signs of the disease, medical treatment should be provided by your veterinarian. Haphazard administration of home remedies could worsen the condition. Worming your pet certainly is of no benefit.

Many pets die each year when their owners treat the disease improperly or delay seeking treatment from a veterinarian. The proper medication must be provided in a dose determined on the basis of your pet's age, weight and general condition.

If the pet survives the primary infection without treatment, it can become a carrier for the disease. Suspected carriers must be treated, and their quarters and runs cleaned with a disinfectant.

Strict sanitation is the major factor in controlling and preventing coccidiosis. Kennels should be dry and clean; runs should receive sun part of each day and feces removed daily. Shaded, moist ground, although comfortable in warm weather, increases survival of coccidia eggs and is not a good location for your pet's living quarters.

Coccidia have successfully developed parasitic relationships with a number of warm-blooded animals. Cattle, sheep, poultry and pets are all attacked by different varieties of coccidia. Dogs and cats are susceptible to infection by three principal forms of the parasite. Recovery from an attack by one form does not offer immunity to attacks by the other forms.

If you feel your pet has contracted coccidiosis, recommend you contact your veterinarian promptly. Your pet's weakened condition will make it more susceptible to secondary infections such as pneumonia or distemper.

BACKSTAIRS AT THE WHITEHOUSE

by GWEN BAGNI and PAUL DUROV

Bantam Books will publish BACKSTAIRS AT THE WHITEHOUSE, an original novel by Gwen Bagni and Paul Durov based on their screenplay for the forthcoming eight-hour dramatic event from Ed Friendly Productions.

The novel will be released in conjunction with the airing of the multi-part television series by NBC-TV in early 1979.

BACKSTAIRS AT THE WHITEHOUSE is the story of the lives of Lillian Rogers Parks and her mother, Maggie Rogers, who served as maids in the White House for five decades, spanning eight administrations from Taft through Eisenhower. The story focuses on the lives of the permanent residents, i.e. the staff, and their relationships with the transient First Families.

The new book will be based on source material taken from the bestselling non-fiction work My Thirty Years Backstairs at the White House written by Lillian Rogers Parks in collaboration with Frances Spatz Leighton and published by Fleet Press in 1961.

The Bantam novel will also incorporate a great deal of new material obtained by the authors through recent taped interviews with the 80-year-old Mrs. Parks.

Now in production, BACKSTAIRS AT THE WHITEHOUSE is scheduled to be before the cameras until September. The television show will star Leslie Uggams and Olivia Cole portraying the roles of Mrs. Parks and her mother, Maggie Rogers, respectively.

Other stars signed to date include, in alphabetical order, John Anderson, Claire Bloom, Victor Buono, Andrew Duggan, Ed Flanders, Louis Gossett, Jr., Lee Grant, Julie Harris, Eileen Heckart, Celeste Holm, Robert Hooks, Kim Hunter, George Kennedy, Cloris Leachman, Leslie Nielsen, Estelle Parsons, Jan Sterling, Barry Sullivan, Robert Vaughn and Paul Winfield. Ed Friendly will produce the miniseries which Michael O'Hairly will direct.

Good Nutrition

by Dorothy M. Rathmann, Ph.D.

Questions About High Blood Pressure

Q. What is normal blood pressure?

A. Two numbers are recorded in a blood pressure measurement: systolic, the pressure at the moment the heart beats to force blood through the arteries, and diastolic, the pressure between heart beats. Blood pressure varies with age, sex, muscular development, diet, worry, fatigue. It is usually lower in women than men.

In healthy young persons, normal systolic values are 100-120 and diastolic 60-80. With advancing age, blood vessels tend to lose elasticity; systolic values over 140 are not unusual in apparently healthy older persons.

Q. What is hypertension?

A. Hypertension is another word for high blood pressure. An occasional high reading associated with excitement, for example, is normal. However, most doctors regard readings consistently over 140 systolic and over 100 diastolic as being too high. Hypertension is of concern because it is linked with increased risk of heart attacks and strokes.

Perhaps 25 million Americans have some degree of hypertension. Probably 20 million of these have no symptoms.

Q. If I have mild hypertension, how can I help correct it?

A. Some changes in lifestyle - how you eat, work and spend leisure time - can help correct mild hypertension:

1. Lose excess weight. This may mean merely eating smaller portions, consuming less alcohol and eating fewer sweets.

2. Reduce salt intake. Use less in cooking and at the table. Avoid salty snacks.

3. If you smoke, stop.

4. Adopt a prudent diet containing less animal fat and cholesterol. High blood cholesterol levels coupled with hypertension increase the risk of heart attacks. Ask your doctor to tell you about the prudent diet. Some essential features are eating less cheese, whole milk and butter and using polyunsaturated fats (like Mazola corn oil) in salads and in cooking.

5. Exercise regularly.

6. Try meditation-relaxation; reduce exposure to stress. If you have not had your blood pressure checked recently, do so. If you find you have a mild hypertension, don't worry, but do take action under your doctor's guidance. Changing the way you eat and live will usually make significant changes in your blood pressure readings.

For more about sensible eating, send for the Mazola booklet, "A Diet for Today," Dept. DT-GN, Box 307, Coventry, CT 06238.

HOW IS MAPLE SYRUP MADE FROM THE TREE SAP?

SAP FROM THE TREE IS ABOUT 97% WATER! CONSTANT BOILING REDUCES IT TO MAPLE SYRUP. FURTHER BOILING CONCENTRATES IT TO MAPLE SUGAR!

A man never stands so tall as when he stops and reaches down extending his hand to some one in need.

"As we have therefore opportunity," said the Apostle Paul, "let us do good unto all men; especially unto them who are of the household of faith" (Gal. 6:10).

While Jesus is first the Saviour of all who have put their trust in Him, let it be remembered also that he was described in His daily life as one "who went" about doing good..... (Acts 10:38). - L.S. Walker.
